More signs, fewer trees for freeway

Visibility has priority

By David Madsen

The approximately 43 billboards that have gone up along the San Bernardino (10) Freeway corridor over the past two years may be a sign of things to come.

That's because a statewide Caltrans policy that allows the eucalyptus trees in the corridor to be trimmed to provide visibility for billboards, also applies to other types of signs.

"We will be under more pressure to do more and more trimming as the area develops," said Bob Thompson, Caltrans deputy district director of maintenance.

Currently, a dispute between Fontana and Caltrans over the policy, which allowed 70 trees in front of billboards to be trimmed recently, was scheduled to be heard in San Bernardino Superior Court on April 4.

Fontana city officials said many of the trees were "chopped to death" when pruned back by trimmers hired by billboard companies.

The trees are located on Caltrans property in a nearby unincorporated area of San Bernardino County.

But Fontana wants to see if it has any legal sphere of influence over the trees, said

Despite trimming of eucalyptus trees, some billboards along the San Bernardino (10) Freeway in Fontana remain obscured.

Russ Carlsen, Fontana special projects director.

However, the court hearing appears to be only a last minute shot by the city in a war against billboard companies that is already over.

Officials from three area billboard companies have already agreed not to put up any additional billboards, said Tim Lynch of General Outdoor Advertising.

Advertising.

And there are few corridor

locations left where billboards could still go up because the area already has been "saturated," said Pat McGuckian, senior planner with the county Land Management Department.

Also, many corridor cities presently prohibit billboards and the county is in the process of tightening its policy restricting new billboards.

So signs now appear to be See SIGNS/Page 2

Lack of parking stalls downtown development

By Kathy Betts

Not enough parking in growing sections of the Upland Town Center is prompting city officials to halt all future development there until more parking stalls are provided.

"The (proposed) ordinance is another word for moratorium," said Mike Gruenke, president of the Town Center Economic Development Corporation, which represents all 80 property owners at the center.

At a recent City Council meeting, Gruenke said "a more workable ordinance" is needed to prevent penalizing property owners wanting to add additional square footage to their businesses or to reconstruct them with the same footage.

Gruenke cited the predicament of Mike Cobb, owner of Upland's second oldest building which burned down last month. Cobb wants to rebuild the 10,000-square-foot building, but Gruenke said 8,000-square-feet would have to be for parking if the proposed ordinance would pass.

Council members gave initial approval to the parking assessment ordinance recently, but final approval is needed at their next meeting April 11.

Several council members agreed that the ordinance needs work, but wanted to give it initial approval to set the wheels of progress in motion.

Bill Hill, president of the UTC Merchants Association, said the association's parking committee will be meeting Friday to discuss the proposed ordinance. A poll of merchants also will be taken and the results presented to the council April 11, he said.

"We need to have a concensus with property owners and merchants. Merchants need the (parking) spaces for customers and property owners want to build," Hill said, adding that he did not have a personal RIVERSIDE - The same smog that makes you wheeze and damages your lungs causes trees in the area to whither and die.

Scientists at the Forest Fire Laboratory operated by the U.S. Forest Service in Riverside have been studying the effects of pollution on trees since 1974. Now they propose to study how gradual global warming might affect forest trees, soil and water supply

They presented their case recently to Rep. George E. Brown Jr., D-Riverside, and an aide to U.S. Sen. Peter Wilson, R-Calif. The governmentfunded laboratory would like to step up its research to include the role of carbon dioxide in the destruction of forests. The presence of the harmful gas in the air has increased in the last 30 years and is expected to double during the next century.

The four-block Town Center, surrounding the intersection of Second Avenue and Ninth Street, consists of about 50 stores; many of which have been there since 1925, Gruenke said.

Property owners are considering tearing down their buildings and rebuilding them to prior dimensions, he said.

Like most town centers, Gruenke said, Upland's is built in a certain formation, which would change if property owners were required to pave more parking stalls near their businesses.

Gruenke suggested that the parking assessment district buy nearby parking lots, which were shown in a recent planning department survey not to be in full use

Max Williams, owner of an architectural firm in the center, suggested that wide streets in the area be repainted to provide diagonal instead of parallel

Gruenke believed this would offer an additional 100 parking spaces to the center's current

Upland's first parking assessment district, created in the early 1960s, divided the Town Center into three zones -Zone A, a core of the center's oldest stores; Zone B, whose stores surround those in A similar to a bulls'-eye target; and Zone C with stores surrounding those in B.

That assessment district. compared with the one proposed, would give owners in Zone A stores 80 instead of 100 percent exemption from meeting the city's parking requirements. which is one space per 250 square feet of the business.

Stores in zones B and C would remain 10 and 5 percent exempted from Upland's parking requirements, respectively.

Gruenke said Zone A stores should remain 100 percent exempted, yet if the council insists on an 80 percent exemption then those stores should pay less fees to the district for long-term traffic

"(The ordinance) should be a temporary solution to a longrange problem," Gruenke said, asking that a 12-month sunset provision be included to push city staff to solve long-term traffic problems. "We've been working on this problem for several years."

replacing billboards as the greatest threat to corridor trees and motorists' eyesights.

"Property on freeway frontage with an on-premise sign can ask for visibility," said Ed Kress, Caltrans' chief landscape

"We try to accommodate them, but we don't try to provide full visibility. ... Hopefully, in this case we can select plants that take care of visibility down low and trim trees to allow visibility," Kress said.

Kress said that corridor trees were planted before a change in the land use occurred and that future "conflicts" can be expected.

Many cities in the corridor such as Fontana and Rialto presently restrict or limit freestanding and building signs along the freeway.

However, the county allows signs on unincorporated land where the zoning is appropriate, McGuckian said.

Local educators hail NTSB school bus report

By Natalie Shore

The National Transportation Safety Board has taken months to figure out what school officials have known for years about aging school buses, local educators said recently

Nevertheless, school officials hailed the NTSB's report urging pre-1977 school buses be taken off the road to hasten the removal of the substandard vehicles, school officials said.

It probably will serve as an incentive to make something happen at the state level," said Anthony Lardieri, superintendent of Fontana schools.

"Any time anything like this comes out, it does create an awareness in people's minds that causes some anxiety for legislators," said Dean Smothers, superintendent of the Chaffey Joint Union High School District.

Released March 28, the NTSB's report studied last year's school bus crash near Carrollton, Ky., in which 27 people died of smoke inhalation because they could not escape.

Although the accident was caused by a drunken driver, a newer bus with modern safety emergency exits and fire retardant seats could have prevented the tragedy, the report

The unsafe vehicles represent more than one-fifth of the school nationwide, according to the NTSB. However, nearly half of local schools' buses on the road at the time of the Kentucky disaster were built before 1977

The NTSB's findings also come as no surprise to area lawmakers regularly involved in school legislation.

The report will help garner support for current ways of trying to pay for new buses, agreed Assemblyman Chuck Bader, R-Pomona, and state Sen. Bill Leonard, R-Upland.

"It's not new news," said Bader, who has introduced a $100 million bond issue for the 1990 statewide ballot to help school districts replace unsafe buses.

"It is helpful that the issue will be underlined publicly," said Bader, who authored a similar measure which failed in committee last year.

"It turns up the heat," he said.

photosynthesis. But too much carbon dioxide and other gases may cause the earth to warm a phenomenon called the greenhouse effect.

The cause of the overabundance of these gases ranges from clearing the jungles of Brazil to running air conditioners.

Cities already are warmer than rural areas because the buildings and pavement absorb sunlight, explained Rowan Rowntree of the Pacific Southwest Forest and Range Experiment Station. People turn up their air conditioners to beat the heat, but that emits carbon dioxide into the air, forming a warming dome over the city.

People turn up their air conditioners another notch, and the vicious cycle feeds on itself," Rowntree said.

The Riverside laboratory is currently pumping acid fog and sulphur dioxide-tainted air into clear tent-like greenhouses to measure the effects on various pine and fir seedlings. Those most sensitive to smog - both in the forests and the test laboratory - are Ponderosa and Jeffrey pines, said Paul Miller, a plant pathologist at the laboratory

The center moves camp to Garner Valley on Mount San Jacinto in the summer to expose plants to smog.

"The smog weakens the trees and makes them more susceptible to insects and diseases," Miller said

Montclair making plans for Holt and Mission

By Kathy Betts

By the end of this year, Montclair officials hope to have specific plans in hand to dictate how to best develop Holt and Mission boulevards.

City staff members are seeking proposals from outside consultants willing to envision future successes on the two busy, parallel and similar eastwest streets, City Planner Hal Fredricksen said.

"Residents and particularly businesses will be consulted on the projects," he said.

The Montclair Redevelopment Agency has budgeted $50,000 for each specific plan, although that amount could rise or fall depending on what is offered, Fredricksen said.

Holt's plan will be executed first with "continued strengthening" of the T-shaped auto mall on the street's east side near Central Avenue with more service-oriented businesses built on the westside, he said.

Large vacant lots now can be seen on the south side of Holt near Vernon, Rose and Monte Vista avenues.

New construction projects can be seen on both the southeast and southwest corners of Holt and Vernon — Montclair's first full-service car wash that will be opening by next week and the year-old Merrill Lynn Plaza that still is seeking tenants.

Construction recently got under way on a $3½ million commercial and industrial center on the southeast corner of Holt and Ramona Avenue and should be completed in June, said Richard Hunsaker, the Irvinebased developer.

"We see the Ramona project as valuable to the city," said Fredricksen, who is coordinating both the Holt and Mission boulevard plans. "We want it to tie in to the rest of Holt."

"It might take a while to rent it all, but in time it should be a very good development," Hunsaker said

The 78,000-square-foot center will be built in two phases — a 33,000-square-foot commercial retail section housing an estimated 10 tenants and then a 45,000-square-foot section of ight industrial or manufacturing services by another 20 tenants, Hunsaker said.

A tilt-up concrete design will be featured and an unusual "anchor" — Quality Thrift, an 18,000-square-foot store operated by the non-profit American Cance Society, Fredricksen said.

Anticipated services in the center's commercial retail section include convenience and grocery stores, retail outlets and restaurants, Hunsaker said. "More shopping for pedestrians — a type of plaza," Fredricksen added.

A printing shop, a maintenance firm, a computer repair shop and a glass shop are potential uses for the lightindustrial section of the development, Fredricksen said. =

STRAIGHT TALK

It takes a commitment to achieve success. Being successful isn't worth it if you don't enjoy what you're doing.
Success in real estate comes easier if you're the type of individual who sincerely wants to help another person rather than being commission hungry.
A successful real estate office is a team of people who are as excited by the other agent's victories as much as their own.
If you share my philosphy, I'd like to talk to you. Licensed or not, call Doug Madison at
